

Aurora's Nightmare Prologue: Thoughts at the End of the World

Josiah Lebowitz

So this is how it ends...

Even now, as the world crumbles and dissolves around me, thoughts of you fill my mind.

I loved you ever since we were children... But it was more than that. You were everything to me.

My friend, my love, my light... My very reason for life itself.

As we grew and the years passed, through every up and down, there was never any doubt in my mind that we would be together forever.

Yet, here I am...alone...

There are so many emotions within me. Shock, sadness, anger, loneliness, despair...

But, most of all, I'm numb.

It's all too much. I don't know what I should feel. Without you, I'm not even sure who I am...

I keep wondering if there was something I could have done, a different choice I could have made... I'd give anything to try again, to have a single chance to save you.

Just one miracle... Is that too much to ask?

But they're called miracles because they don't happen. I know that better than anyone else...

There's no future. For you, or me, or anyone in this world.

I'm the only one left, and in a few more moments I too will fade into the darkness...

It makes me wonder...

The years we spent together... Those precious irreplaceable times...

Were you ever really mine? Or was it all nothing but a dream?